The Benefit to “Being With” a Child

Too often we "parent" or educate children. We forget the need and the how to of simply being with a child. We forget how "being with" a child allows them to be seen and heard. This will grow into the child feeling valued and important. As a child feels that they are worth "being with", they grow a stronger sense of self, internal motivation and self-responsibility. This is the key to successful and healthy relationships.
